Council questions and comments followed.

5. Public Comments

Peter Segal (representing Santa Clara County League of Women Voters) stated San José must provide leadership and financial assistance to farmers to promote agriculture in the greenbelt areas.

Michael Melon urged Council to think broadly and develop fringe agriculture in the Coyote Valley to supply local grocery stores and farmers' markets.

David MacLeroy (Friends of Coyote Valley Greenbelt) suggested that the City and County form an agency similar to the Open Space Authority to implement the greenbelt as a sustainable livable community and address funding needs.

Eric Carruthers (retired County planner) states that Coyote Valley is the last chance for urban agriculture and we must move forward for it to become a reality.

Michelle Beasley favors the Sierra Club's ecosystem approach for a greenbelt strategy.

Virginia Holtz stated that agricultural mitigation is a critical component of the greenbelt strategy being successful.

Reggie Knox, Coordinator for California Farmlink, offered their service to connect farmers with available lands and funding resources.

Melissa Hippard (Sierra Club) stated interest in CalTrain transit oriented development and a more integrative approach to development to protect the riparian corridor.

Brian Schmidt (Committee for Green Foothills) opposes development of the Coyote Valley but feels it important to develop the details on the institutional management needed for conservation easements.

Kerry Williams (Coyote Housing Group) feels a CalTrain station is very important to this plan to help realize a transit oriented development and should be supported by regional as well as citywide funding.

Eric Fillipo stated he owns greenbelt acreage and is concerned about denser growth.

Deputy Director Prevetti produced an earlier slide in response to questions from Council Member Chirco regarding the density and noise issues.

4. Next Steps

Deputy Director Prevetti stated the next steps to be taken will be additional study sessions scheduled for April, May, and June, to address traffic and traffic approaches, financial triggers and phasing, the specific plan document, and proposed zoning code.
